

SOCIAL IMPACT IN SCOTLAND WHAT'S THE POINT?

As the third, community and social enterprise sectors in Scotland mature, there is an even greater need for groups to evidence, articulate and promote the impact of what they do. The ones who have the deepest impact often have the least capacity to do the evaluation. There is a plethora of methodologies and an underlying desire by policy makers and funders to tidy this scene up, ideally into a single system. This half day gathering will open up debate on whether front line organisations should use a specific methodology at all and crucially how these different methodologies might dovetail.
